Book of the Week

Publisher's Weekly writes: Journalist Strauss now offers a terrific look at the dysfunctional livelihoods of stardom, a theme based on his many interviews for various publications. Strauss went back to his original interview tapes and notes in search of moments—mostly unpublished—that reveal "the truth or essence of each person, story, or experience."

Movie of the Week

127 Hours is a 2010 biographical adventure film produced, co-written and directed by Danny Boyle. The film stars James Franco as mountain climber Aron Ralston, who became trapped by a boulder in Robbers Roost, Utah, for more than five days in early 2003 before amputating his arm with a dull knife.

Website of the Week

On March 23 Rock the Vote and the National Education Association are proud to announce the first-ever annual Democracy Day, a national effort to promote civics education in high schools. Democracy Day will also celebrate the 40-year anniversary of the 26th Amendment, which gave 18 year olds the right to vote.

Democracy Day is an opportunity for Rock the Vote to bring it's innovative Democracy Class program to hundreds of high schools around the country. Democracy Class is a non-partisan 45-minute lesson that combines pop culture, music, video, classroom discussion and a mock election to teach juniors and seniors in high school about their right to vote.
